Unique System Deters Campus Vandalism

On all school campuses, vandalism, break-ins, and theft are ever-present problems. On this campus, the problem is being handled in a unique way; not merely through the use of a single watchman or a lone police officer, but through the co-operation of privately hired watchmen and several St. Louis police departments.

On duty each evening, Monday through Thursday, are two privately hired watchmen, Mr. Donald Block and Mr. William Battiste. They are responsible for supervising the building during this time, keeping the office open and providing any services required by the night school students. These men, who are also teachers at the Normandy high school, rotate evenings, each taking duty two nights a week.

A second type of regular watchman on patrol of the school building and grounds is Mr. Eugene Hogue, a deputy marshal of the Normandy Police Department. He is on duty from 3:30 to 11 p.m. every day. Mr. Hogue estimates that he travels about 50 miles a night in the performance of his duties. It was mainly due to the vigilance and persistence of Mr. Hogue that the vandals who broke into the vending machines here last Spring were apprehended and prosecuted.

According to Mr. Hogue, all regular police methods are used in the detecting and prosecution of such vandals. It is Mr. Hogue's aim, however, to help rather than punish the young people he deals with. In an attempt to build this feeling of friendliness between himself and the students, Mr. Hogue assists in the parking of cars at school function and sees that they are protected from theft or destruction.

St. Louis Campus Evening Concerts To Premiere Monday, October 22

Sale Will Be October 22

The Student Senate voted recently to hold the library book sale from 9:45 to 2:15 on Monday, October 22. St. Louis Campus students will be able to contribute books at either of the two collection points until 3 p.m., Friday, October 19.

The sale will be conducted in the main lobby by SA Senators. Students will have a choice of three price ranges: 10c, 25c, and 50c. All money received will be used to buy books which the Campus library would not otherwise be able to afford.

Landmark to Give Halloween Dance

A Halloween Dance, sponsored by the "Landmark," the St. Louis Campus Yearbook, will be held on the Campus Saturday night, October 27.

At a meeting on October 8, the Student Senate voted to have the Social Committee work with the yearbook in organizing and promoting the dance. All profits, however, will go to the "Landmark."

Senators on the Social Committee are: Marge Doerr, chairman; Jim Emahelser, Jim Rosenfeld, Carl Doerr, Gay Simpson, Dave Hart, Allen Stein, and Barry Broder.

Details concerning the type of dress, the exact time, and the price of tickets will be published in the next issue of the TIGER CUB.

Appealing to the varied tastes in classical music, a series of four concerts will be offered free of charge in the auditorium (room 108) for the general public. The concerts are scheduled for October 22, December 17, February 25, and April 8. The first concert, October 22 at 8:30 p.m. features the Aristeia Ensemble, a newly formed group under the direction of William Schatzkammer, who will make their debut in St. Louis. The Aristeia Ensemble is a Chamber String Orchestra composed of 17 members of the St. Louis Symphony.

The first two selections will include Adagio and Fugue, and Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, both composed by Mozart. The third selection, Concerto da Camera, written for the flute and English horn, was composed by Arthur Honegger, a Swiss composer who spent his life in France. He belonged to a group known as "Les Six" with such other artists as Milhaud, Poulenc, Auric, Tailleferre, and Durey. In the 1920's, "Les Six" displayed the more radical trends in French music. The flute soloist will be Israel Borouchoff, while George Hussey will perform the English horn solo.

After a brief intermission, the concert will close with Tchaikovsky's Serenade for Strings, opus 48.

Monday night, December 17, is the next concert date at which time the St. Louis Music Society under the direction of James Miller will present "Christmas Music of the Renaissance and Baroque" in both vocal and instrumental form.

On February 25, William Maule, will perform a solo concert covering the entire musical literature for the harpsichord, a precursor of the modern piano. Most popular from the 16th through the 18th century, it has strings which were plucked by quill points connected with the keys.

The final concert will take place on April 8 as the St. Louis Chamber Orchestra and Chorus, conducted by Ronald Arnatt, will introduce one of Stravinsky's masterpieces, Les Noces, "The Wedding". This consists of a huge cantata of almost unbroken singing for solos and chorus. Although the vocal part of the composition was completed by 1917, Stravinsky worked six additional years to find the suitable accompaniment. Finishing the score in 1923, he finally chose four pianos and a large body of percussion instruments.

Although only 13 members would have been elected to the Senate from each class, the tie in the freshman class raised the number to 14.

One hundred sixty freshmen voted out of 360, or about 46%; however, 95 sophomores voted out of a possible 204, making a strong 47% of the class.

The first meeting was held on Monday night, October 8, at 8 o'clock. A social committee was set up. Amidst the new business discussed were the buzz book preparations and the concert series.

Dignitaries Invited To Concert Series

The Publicity Committee of the University of Missouri - St. Louis Campus Concert Series has announced that they are personally inviting many public dignitaries to attend the concerts. The committee is now in the process of sending a brochure containing pertinent information about the four concerts and a personal invitation requesting the attendance of many Federal, State, and local public officials and politicians.

It has also been noted that the St. Louis area radio and television stations are expected to announce the series. The committee hopes that the individual students will aid in publicizing this cultural event.

Today Last Day For Yearbook Down-payment Dr. Crowley to

Today is the last day subscriptions for the St. Louis Campus yearbook, the "Landmark," may be obtained. Students can purchase their yearbooks in the lounge by paying $2.00 now with the balance of $1.50 due later.

Richard Heinrich and Leslie Shrier have been appointed co-editors and will supervise the picture assignments and general layout of the book.

In a meeting held Tuesday, October 2, Mr. C. E. Potter stressed two points: (1) that all members of the yearbook staff should devote themselves to the job; (2) they should promote the sale of at least 300 yearbooks before publication.

Mr. Monti, the printer of the 1961-62 "Landmark," explained the technical job of publishing a yearbook. He told of an Editors Kit which is supplied for the layout and said the first decision the new staff faces will be the number of pages in the yearbook.

The only new addition in the planning stage now is a calendar of events. Many new innovations will be added to the yearbook before it goes to press.

Heinrich and Shrier added that, unlike last year, the landmark will be distributed to the students of the Campus before the end of school in May. However, no student will appear in the annual unless they have purchased the book.

There is still a limited supply of last year's yearbook available for purchase in the student activities room.

"Laura" is the Drama Club's First Production, KMOX to Audition Students

Eighteen students attended the first meeting of the Drama Club. Sharon Landis, John Dudash, and Al Becker volunteered to work on the club's planning committee.

The play selected was "Laura", a psychological mystery concerning the death of a beautiful girl. Anyone interested in any phase of stage work or acting should contact John Dudash, the club's president.

The Experimental Workshop Theatre of K M O X has extended an invitation to the members of drama and literature departments of colleges and universities in the St. Louis area to audition for roles in a series of 1 hour long productions.

Anyone who is interested should contact Mr. Roy McCarthy at ST. 1-2345, between the hours of 12:00 noon and 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Modern Dance Resumes Soon

All girls interested in modern dancing are invited to join Orchesis, which is under the direction of Carolyn Henson who is also captain of the cheerleaders.

The group, which was started last year, was established to promote interest in body mechanics. The girls work with movements and exercises for coordination.

Last year the group performed at the Roaring 20's Dance. This year they hope to perform in more activities.

A further announcement concerning the time and place of meetings will be made as soon as plans are organized. In the meantime all those interested should contact Carolyn Henson.

Give 2nd Lecture in Series, Thursday

The "Daytime Lecture Series", organized by Dr. Crowley, Mrs. Ramirez, and Mrs. Tyte is now under way. Maximum co-operation between speaker and audience is the key note for the series.

In yesterday's "Pre-concert Warm Up" Mr. Charles Armbruster emphasized the great opportunity to the students here in having professional musicians performing on the campus.

The schedule for the rest of October is as follows:

OCTOBER 18: Dr. Crowley will talk on "Glories of the Incas" at 10 o'clock in room 108. The lecture will include information on the beginning of the Inca Empire, and the first Inca Writer. This lecture will be of special interest to Spanish students.

OCTOBER 24: Miss McDonnell's lecture will be on "Dos Passos" at 11 o'clock in room 30. Students of English Literature might be particularly interested in this discussion.

OCTOBER 30: Dr. Fagan will lecture on "Natural Law" at 10 o'clock in room 108. This lecture should be of special interest to all college students.

The "Daytime Lecture Series" was prompted by requests for more intellectual activities for the students. Lectures are planned to run once a week through the month of May.

During the month of December Harris Teachers College Choir under the direction of Dr. Abelson will appear.

Judy Vetter and Sharon Hutson have volunteered as hostesses. Mrs. Fisher has offered to help with posters for the lectures.

Dr. Crowley emphasized that volunteers, suggestions and above all everyone's attendance would be welcome by the committee.

Aim of New Debating Club

A society for individuality in thought has been formed on the St. Louis Campus.

The Debate Club, sponsored by Dr. J. M. Fagan, held its first meeting Wednesday, October 3, 1962. At this meeting David Esche was elected President. The secretary will be chosen at the next meeting. A moderator will be chosen at each meeting to moderate the next debate.

At the meeting the members discussed topics for future debate. At the end of the year a prize will be given by Dr. Fagan to the person who is the best debator.

The purpose of the organization is to train students to apply logic and to learn poise, organization of ideas, and orderly discussion. Membership in the club is open to all interested students, as the success of the club depends on the interest and effort made by the students.

Vandalism

As a testimony to the success of Mr. Hogue's method of employing friendship and understanding to prevent crime, it has been noted by the Normandy School maintenance department that the amount of window breakage has dropped to a minimum in the two years that Mr. Hogue has worked for the Normandy School District.

In addition to this regular force, the Bel-Nor Police Department cooperates with the school board by sending an occasional patrolman to check the campus grounds. The St. Louis County police department also provides members of its force whenever their services are needed. One such officer was present on the days of final registration to safeguard the large sums of money on hand at the time.

THE REMAINS of a session with the elite citizens of the crumbloafianited society in the St. Louis Campus student lounge.

Eligance Presint on Cimpus Effusive Pride in the Elite

Among St. Louisans who have pride in our institution as a cultural addition to their city, there is one particularly select group whose membership will increase and whose aims will be propagated by certain people enrolled in the school. When they finish their studies, these students will have had ample opportunity to perfect those attributes of untidyness and personal negligence necessary for membership in the larger group. These young lower classmen from the upper class are looking forward eagerly to the day when they graduate into the senior ranks of their strata and can be about the serious destruction of order by scattering cans and papers about so that forests and streets alike are more colorful and appear more "lived-in."

These souper-uppers of our school have characteristics of interest to those wishing to imitate them. They don't waste time with such inanities as cleanliness or consideration for others, but instead are fascinated by the superior interests in life, namely themselves, pinochle, poker, and discussions of world issues such as which day to go to the beauty parlor for a Russian Bear Cut, or how to blend absinthe with root beer over crushed ice. These eminent citizens are democratic. They will include some of the lesser members of the school in their little groups, but almost always these lower class slob cannot adjust to the others' higher standard of living, and show their slovenly manners by using napkins, ashtrays, or actually removing wrappers or mutilated straws and putting them in the most shunned of all public nuisances, the wastebasket.

To avoid classifying yourself as one of the multitude not considered for membership, you must practice these difficult maneuvers until you are skillful. Never ever pick up gum, candy, or cigarette papers that may fall from tables, and crush cigarettes on the thickest rugs you can find for big black holes result which permanently beautify. Try your utmost to spill liquids and thicker substances if you can find them, and always leave a room dirtier than it was when you entered. The resulting fastidiousness will identify you as a member of that elite metropolitan-wise, cosmopolitized crumbloafianited society eagerly awaiting your arrival.

$489 from Sale of Stickers Fines now at a Low Ebb

Leniency has been the keynote for traffic violations this year. A minor group of college students numbering three has been fined for breaking the Campus traffic regulations. Up to this date the only offense had been parking on campus without a traffic sticker.

Officials explained other traffic fines had been issued but the violators were excused without paying for the fines.

The Student Association has received a total of $489.00 for parking stickers as of October 8. The SA revealed that they are $1.25 short since one student received a sticker without paying for it. All in all 421 parking stickers have been purchased for the school year of Sept. 1962, through May 1963.

The purchasing of stickers has been divided into two classes. Three hundred and eighty-five parking stickers at $1.25 apiece were purchased during registration. Thirty-six students who planned to use an additional car this year purchased a second sticker for the price of $.25.

The Student Association is aware that some students were charged a $1.25 instead of $.25 for a duplicate sticker at the beginning of registration. They are in the process of checking and it will be refunded as soon as possible to those who were overcharged.

Concerts

According to Mr. Charles Armbruster, chairman of the committee for the series, the concerts have a three-fold purpose: "In order to make our college into a complete university, it is necessary for it to grow in the arts, to promote the culture of the community, and to advocate the interests of its patrons." The funds have been made available in part by the St. Louis Musicians' Union, Dean Palmquist of the University Columbia Campus, and an anonymous donor of the community.

An Opportunity for All

The concert series which this University is soon to produce promises to provide for its students and the citizens of St. Louis alike, a succession of superb musical achievements by musicians of the highest professional quality from the metropolitan area. They will contribute to the creation of a strong common bond between the college and the community; a bond which will be produced by an active interest in raising the cultural level of the community with the University acting as an intermediary.

Alfred North Whitehead, in his book, "The Aims of Education," defined culture as, "activity of thought, and receptiveness to beauty, and humane feeling." It is the contention of this University that the cultivation of the minds of the citizens of this school and community will be accomplished by the University's acceptance of its role as the true center of cultural activity.

Furthermore, it is the opinion of the TIGER CUB that the student body owes much gratitude to Mr. Armbruster, Mr. Potter, and the many other people who assisted in promoting the concert series. Gratefulness is also due to the Saint Louis Musicians Union, Dean Palmquist of the University of Missouri - Columbia Campus, and an anonymous patron of this college and fine arts, for their active support of this avant garde endeavor.

Therefore, it is most imperative that the student body heed the call for conscientious support of this great cultural event. But if the students fail to show an active interest, if they fail to lead the community in the support of this University, there may be no compassion for their apathy.

The Senators and Their Battle

At first glance, the recent Student Senate elections seem encouraging, for more St. Louis Campus students participated than ever before. However, a closer look at the statistics reveals the error of this optimism. In last year's Senate voting, 52% of the student body participated. This year the average was 48.5%.

Neither class can be singled out as the culprit since only 1% separates them--46% for the freshmen and 47% for the sophomores. Rather, the fault lies with the entire student body.

Unfortunately, the story is much the same throughout the nation. A vast segment of the American electorate simply does not care. However, the mere existence of such a problem does not in any way excuse its presence on this Campus. Our school is too young, its needs are too great, to tolerate apathy on any scale, much less in more than 50% of the student body.

In such a situation, the new Senate has its work cut out, for they fight the hardest battle of all, the battle against indifference and apathy. We certainly hope the student body realizes the urgency of supporting them in this fight.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL

In My Opinion

by Jim Rosenfeld

Due to the extreme emphasis on science, the advanced industrialization of our society, and the growing specter of excessive militarization, people tend to see life from the position of "Technocrats." They exist in a two dimensional "Brave New World". A world of pragmatism and efficiency, where the practical and the expedient are necessarily good. In modern life, a code of ethics seems unnecessary to many people.

But our mechanized age is not the first period of history in which people were utilitarians instead of humanitarians. For in Biblical times, before the time of Moses the Jews were more or less bargaining with God. However, after Moses appeared and led them out of Egypt and into the Promised Land; he received from God the Ten Commandments. It was then possible to communicate to man, by written law, the fact that ethics are essential to mankind, that man must practice humanity towards his fellow man. This is what adds the third dimension to life; the dimension of morality, and of brotherly love.

In the two dimensional world it is not "useful" to be ethical in government; it is not expedient. Governor Barnett of Mississippi is a magnificent example of a personality in a two dimensional world. In his opinion, it would be more expedient to have James Meredith leave "Old Miss". It would have been practical if Mr. Meredith had not even attempted to enroll in the University. His proof: the deaths which have resulted. James Meredith has been blamed for these deaths. Meredith, a three dimensional person, a man who not only practices morality, but who also attempts to exercise his rights of a free citizen in a democracy.

The true guilt for these needless deaths should be placed on those people who would show hatred and bigotry, and incite a rebellion. These men do not possess the greatest virtues of man: compassion, mercy, charity, humility, and true brotherly love. They do not heed the Ten Commandments. They ignore the teachings of Christ and his disciples.

But, this has to be a world in which ethics become the third dimension. In the words of Charles Dickens: "Let us be moral. Let us contemplate existence."

ROTC Program Offered to Campus

All male students in good standing at the St. Louis campus of the University of Missouri are now eligible to participate in the Air Force ROTC.

According to a letter from Alan J. Teague, Professor of Air Science at Washington University, this program will be given on the campus at that school.

It takes one hour per week in the fall semester of the first year. The fee is $25.00. Interested students must start classes no later than Monday, October 15. For additional information call VO, 3-0100, extension 4567.

Students are reminded their ROTC obligation is not precluded by their attendance at the St. Louis Campus. They will be subject to the same requirements as all incoming students upon transfer to any other college or university. Advisors should be contacted for details or any specific situation.

As the Editorial Editor of the TIGER CUB, it is my principle obligation to inform the students about the current events and problems associated with this University, and to analyze local and national occurrences. When I write about any news concerning the school, the St. Louis area, the state, and the nation, I state an opinion which I believe is objectively formulated. However, there will undoubtedly be varying opinions about any issues throughout the whole student body.

In a democratic society in which there exists freedom of the press, it is essential for the press, whether newspaper or magazine, to allow for the readers a "Letters to the Editor" column. The purpose of such column is to permit the readers to state their opinions concerning any given article, and to allow the readers to inform the Editor of any discrepancies in any statement which he considers factual. Therefore, in future issues, there will be space afforded for any such letters.

(Ed. note: All Letters to the Editor should be brought to the SA Office or to the school's Administration Office.)

• New Vocation For Former Interrogator

By Jane Woods

Why would a military interrogator of World War II become interested in the job of guidance counselor? Mr. Morris Blitz, counselor for the Normandy School District, chose this vocation because of his war experiences, which included not only personal contact with the enemy, but the internment of some of his own family in concentration camps. What is the direct link from interrogator to guidance counselor? It is Mr. Blitz' belief that helping students to prepare for their profession by encouraging a realistic evaluation of the strengths and shortcomings in their abilities, increases their objectivity in other areas of their lives. "This is most important to world peace," he says, "because wars are caused by misunderstanding or intolerance of others' beliefs and ways of life."

The draft summoned him in 1942, and since he included his linguistic qualifications on the multitude of forms, Military Intelligence became aware of him. He was sent to the Camp Ritchie Maryland Military Intelligence Center, informally dubbed MI School, and there underwent interrogations in his several languages until his questioners were satisfied that he could qualify for training.

Since most methods of American interrogation do not incorporate the stereotyped brainwashing techniques, Mr. Blitz learned to elicit information without permanently affecting a man's mind. Army instructors in Order of Battle classes taught him to utilize such knowledge as the division and rank numbers of enemy officers. Also, he did not learn to speculate about enemy strength with only a sort of male intuition, but rather was taught the exact number of men, guns, and types of artillery that each German unit included. With this information memorized, and with the aid of the Soldbuch, a German Identification Book which each serviceman carried

Bob Meinhardt, honor student of the St. Louis Campus, has received the Francis Scholarship from Washington University. The scholarship provides half tuition for one year. Bob plans to apply the scholarship to a degree in psychology. His main interest in that field is nonverbal communication.

Bob was chairman of the committee which drafted the Student Association's constitution and was later elected the Association's first president. He attended the St. Louis Campus for both his freshman and sophomore years.

The TIGER CLUB extends its sincerest, though belated congratulations to Mr. Meinhardt.

to record his travels and war history, Mr. Blitz, and others in his role, could ascertain new Nazi movements.

When he completed this training he began his active army career. His interrogation work and participation in Operation Gold Cup provided him with knowledge of the intolerant and misguided thinking necessarily rampant during the entire war period.

Old Saint Louis Field Club Spans New Saint Louis Campus

The Revolutionary War in Connecticut produced a young soldier scarcely old enough to shoulder a musket, yet a man destined to be of much significance to the entire middle-west, to the State of Missouri, and to the St. Louis Campus in particular. He was Daniel Bissell, who eventually became the military commandant of all the Missouri and Illinois territory in the Louisiana Purchase. After his retirement in 1821 he built an empire that eventually encompassed 2,300 acres. It was on part of this estate that the forebearer of the Bellerive Country Club and thus of the St. Louis Campus, was born. It was called the St. Louis Field Club, and its first secretary was French Rayburn Bissell, grandson of the renowned general.

Incorporated on December 8, 1897, the Field Club was the second of its kind in St. Louis.

Little remains of the colorful institution that gave Bellerive its birth. The ranch-style homes of the Bissell Hills Subdivision now occupy the old nine-hole golf course. A horse farm and a few bungalows have replaced the clubhouse, and the old road dividing the golf course and club house is now a busy section of Bellefontaine Road, just north of Chambers Road.

Still, the St. Louis Field Club was one of the most select and retired of the golf clubs of its day, according to an article in April, 1903 by the GLOBE-DEMOCRAT. The club, a large three story building, boasted all the modern conveniences—a dining room, a kitchen, a huge room for dances and other social gatherings and five guest rooms.

Nevertheless, the Field Club had its problems, the main one of which was indicated by its name. They called it the Field Club for a very simple reason; it was way out in the fields. To complicate matters Henry Ford was still riding a horse and Wilbur and Orville were still wrestling with bicycles, so most of the club's 208 members made their way on the Burlington Railroad, which fortunately stopped almost at the club's back door, 12 miles from Union Station. Of course, public transportation could always be supplemented at the end of the Broadway Line by a wagon or barge, but as more and more the members became increasingly concerned with the location of the club and with this concern, the move to 8001 Natural Bridge in 1909 became more and more inevitable.

CREIGHTON UNIVERSITY

"Asking students their opinions on comprehensive examinations is like asking people whether they're against sin," wrote Pat Kliper, a staff reporter on "The Creightonian." One Arts senior felt more multiple choice tests would be a good idea. Another believed that the exams were "completely innocuous." A week's vacation to review for the exams was suggested by one senior, who also felt, however, that oral comps should be held annually, believing that "this would give the students a chance for more academic counseling."

More trouble at this tropical state institution. The Board of Athletics is looking for another football coach. The student publication offers the Board some advice: "Since our University, in its every aspect, insists in putting last things first, the Board of Athletics is now struggling under idiotic conditions to find a football coach. What for? Why not drop the whole problem by dropping football? Then we drop an embarrassing reflection on the University."

Charges of "vote buying" were leveled against the junior class president at a meeting of the student council. The charge, made by the president of the senior class, said that Robert Gaynor spent his weekend in the dormitory and gave students 25 cents to cast a favorable ballot. Gaynor protested having to "prove his innocence." "I merely lent a few quarters to my friends," he said.

ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

When John Lockhart wanted to transfer from this western school to Penn State, the Pennsylvania school informed him that he would have to apply through the foreign student bureau. Lockhart then decided he didn't want to transfer after all. "I always thought Penn State was in America," he explained.

CINCINNATI UNIVERSITY

The student newspaper blasted the student council for making a motion that would eliminate salaries for all publication editors.

LA SALLE COLLEGE

The governing body of this Philadelphia school has initiated a student judiciary board, which was granted the power to review all cases of student discipline that could result in expulsions, suspension or probation of the accused.

Meanwhile . . Mizzou

By Mary Hildebrand

In keeping with the ever-increasing demand for more aids to education, the town of Columbia, Missouri, home of the main center of the University of Missouri, has seen the following changes:

A new night club, "Bustles and Bowes" with a seating capacity of 1,000 has been opened at 818 Cherry Street. It is within easy walking—or staggering—distance from the Mizzou campus. A citizen of Columbia commenting on the club said that it was just what the students needed to keep them off the streets and out of trouble.

Another boys' dormitory has been recently added to the Missouri campus where the boys already outnumber the girls three to one. This dormitory, after much thought, was erected directly behind the three new girls' dormitories.

A building expansion was also made by the Italian Village—a tavern located in Kampus Town—Columbia's answer to Gaslight Square. The I.V. has taken over a cafe on the Strollway, apparently in the belief that the students would rather drink than eat anyway.

In addition to these expansions, interest in good literature seems to be expanding, too. The campus humor magazine "Show Me" after having been banned for several years from the Mizzou campus as "lewd and demoralizing" was brought back by popular demand this fall. It will be published, however, under censorship by the school.

Kickoff Begins Intramural Competition

The kickoff of the first gridiron game of the 1962 intramural football season was September 25. The two featured clashes that day matched team 1 against team 2, and team 3 against team 4.

The team 1-team 2 game resulted in a scoreless tie. Excellent defense was the keynote of this game. Both teams sported excellent lines and backfield defenders. The rushing line kept the opposing quarterbacks under sufficient pressure to keep pass completions to a minimum.

The second contest of the day kept spectators on the edge of their seats until late in the second half of the game. It looked for a long while as if this game would end in a scoreless tie. Late in the last half, however, Bill Schmidt caught a deciding touchdown pass for team 4. Thus the game ended in a 6-0 victory for Hansen's team.

On September 27, the intramural squads went at it again. This time it was team 5 against team 6 and team 3 against team 1.

In the first contest team 6 staved off a late second half onslaught by team 5 to produce a 6-6 tie. The backfield defenders produced the only scores. For team 6, Dennis Speno intercepted a pass and ran 40 yards for the T.D. For the opposition, Chick Henn intercepted a pass on the 20 yard line, and plunged over for a score. Late in the last half, team 5 threatened once again. They moved from their own 20 to the opposition's 20 yard line in three plays. Proving that they could run with the

Bowlers Begin Season Tomorrow

THE TWO TEAMS who will represent the St. Louis Campus in intercollegiate competition at the Arena Bowl tomorrow are shown above holding on of the trophies they hope to bring back to the Campus.

Tomorrow, October 13, the St. Louis Campus Bowling team will begin league competition at the Arena Bowling Alley.

On Saturday, October 6, the team met with the other league squads to discuss rules and regulations and a tentative schedule. The official league schedule will come out tomorrow.

The teams also bowled to determine their averages. The St. Louis Campus bowlers had a low average of 160, but expect to raise it as the season progresses.

"Parks Air College will probably be our toughest competition," states Captain Carl Doerr. "This year's team has very good possibilities of ending at the top of the league."

Burlis Coaches Little Cardinals; Will Play at Busch Stadium

By Bob Christman

The large membership and intense interest in Little League baseball attests to the growth in scope and progress of this organized pastime for youngsters. However, Little League football is somewhat new on the scene, presenting a unique challenge to the pint-sized players and their coaches. One of these coaches is Barry Burlis, a sophomore at the St. Louis Campus. He, together with Ollie Klostermann (known for his work with the Kutis soccer team and the Seco softball team), directs the actions of the scrappy St. Louis Cardinals Little League team.

To be sure, the teams needn't worry about an enthusiastic crowd; each player brings his own rooting section, his parents. Barry notes that the parents are very cooperative in supplying whatever service they can.

Little League football players don't do all their hustling on the field. Last year the youngsters sold advertising space in their yearbook, a publication distributed at the Little League playoffs held at Busch Stadium.

Although Barry hesitated when asked about unusual happenings in his team play, he finally recounted the opening action in last week's game. It seems his team's opponents kicked off, the ball dropped without being caught — and the opponents picked it up and went all the way for a touchdown! But it doesn't always happen that way. Barry says his team has received many compliments on its hustle and keen competition.

Besides the excellent coaching of Barry Burlis and Ollie Klostermann, the team has an additional incentive to win, for they've lost the first two games of the season. Com'on, Barry, let's see some winning action!

Each team plays six games plus two practice games during a season. An interesting note: These teams play on a full-size field, and call their own signals! One of the few concessions to their size is a smaller than regulation ball.

(Ed. note: On Saturday, October 5, Barry's team won 40-0. This Sunday, October 13, his team will play during the half-time of the professional St. Louis Cardinals game.)
